

Lesson 2

My Mouth's in Airplane Mode!

I. 文意字彙與詞類變化：36%

- blamed 1. Mr. Wang was angry with Cindy and b ed her for breaking his favorite vase.
- pleasant 2. After so many cold and rainy days, today's warm spring sunshine feels really p t.
- solution 3. At this meeting, experts from all over the world tried to find a s n to the problem of global warming.
- warned 4. During the graduation trip, our teacher w ned us not to go out alone at night.
- affect 5. You have to quit smoking, or it will seriously a t your health.
- remained 6. The little boy r ned silent and refused to tell others what he saw at the crime scene.
- announcement 7. When we heard the a t that our team won the championship, we all jumped for joy.
- function 8. Cellphones can f n as alarm clocks to wake up people in the morning.
- indication 9. Nancy has had no energy at work recently, which may be an (indicate) that she has gotten tired of her job.
- normal 10. It is (normally) for you to feel nervous when you talk to your boss.
- compare 11. If you (comparison) Taiwan with Singapore, you'll find that Taiwan has a much more serious littering (亂丟垃圾) problem.
- distractions 12. Jenny didn't finish her job today because there were too many (distract) in the office, like phone calls and emails.

II. 文法選擇：15%

- (A) 1. Bill hopes someday he can be as _____ as Dwayne Johnson.
(A) strong (B) strongly (C) stronger (D) strongest
- (B) 2. I cannot remember the exact time _____ I got home last night.
(A) where (B) when (C) which (D) who
- (D) 3. As we know, country life is quite different _____ city life.
(A) in (B) for (C) with (D) from
- (C) 4. Mr. Wu often makes some purchases at Costco, _____ offers a wide variety of products.
(A) it (B) where (C) which (D) that
- (B) 5. Shelia is looking forward _____ the film which will hit the movie theater soon.
(A) to see (B) to seeing (C) at seeing (D) for seeing

III. 綜合測驗：15%

People always complain that in-flight food tastes bad. It, however, is not the airlines' fault if their food doesn't taste like what you 1.. I know that, since my job is to make in-flight meals.

Studies have shown that when you're up in the air, your tongue doesn't work well. Because of changes in the air pressure and humidity in the airplane cabin, your tongue is less sensitive to taste. 2., your nose functions differently. Up in the sky, it gets 3. blocked that it has difficulty telling the difference between tastes. Even your ears can influence how 4. you enjoy your meal. Experiments have shown that food tastes less sweet or salty on aircraft, where there is usually a lot of noise during a flight.

As a cook, I add more flavoring 5. the dishes to make them tastier. Therefore, don't blame me if you don't like your in-flight meal. Blame your tongue, your nose, and your ears!

- (C) 1. (A) turn to (B) are close to (C) are used to (D) hold on to
- (B) 2. (A) Fortunately (B) Similarly (C) Immediately (D) Suddenly
- (A) 3. (A) so (B) such (C) very (D) too

- (D) 4. (A) far (B) often (C) long (D) much
(C) 5. (A) in (B) for (C) to (D) with

IV. 句型練習：16%

(1-2 題以 S + V + as + adj./adv./many + N/much + N + as + S (+ V)....合併句子)

1. { Derek has read ten English novels.
 { Miranda has read ten English novels. (Derek....)

Derek has read as many English novels as Miranda (has).

2. { Helen looks pretty.
 { Her older sister looks prettier. (Helen....)

Helen doesn't look as/so pretty as her older sister (does).

(3-4 題以...N(,) + where/when + S + V....合併句子)

3. { I visited Taipei 101.
 { My mom and dad had their first date in Taipei 101.

I visited Taipei 101, where my mom and dad had their first date.

4. { You should avoid rush hour.
 { The MRT is full of people during rush hour.

You should avoid rush hour, when the MRT is full of people.

V. 引導式翻譯：9%

1. 跟其他城市的房價比起來，紐約的房價很高。

In comparison with the house prices in other cities, those in New York are very high.

2. 信不信由你，理論上聽起來不錯的事情常常實際上行不通。

Believe it or not, what sounds so good in theory often fails to deliver in practice.

3. 我實在需要做些運動，所以不管天氣怎樣，我今天都會去慢跑。

I really need some exercise, so I'm going jogging today regardless of the weather.

VI. 閱讀測驗：9%

“Would you like something to drink?” We often hear this question when we’re on an airplane. Before choosing coffee, tea, or cola with ice cubes, consider the following.

A study conducted a few years ago in the United States found that the water supply of only a small percentage* of planes passed health standards. These days, most airplanes don’t serve drinking water from the airplane’s water supply. However, hot coffee and tea, as well as ice cubes, may still be made from that water. To be safe, don’t order these hot drinks or ask for ice cubes with your cold drinks.

Water isn’t the only thing you should worry about. There may also be problems with in-flight meals. These meals often come with freshly cut fruit, and though it may look fresh, the fruit was likely cut hours or even days earlier. In addition, if you’re on a flight that includes breakfast, know that your eggs might not be pure eggs but a mixture of eggs with other things. So be wise and think twice before ordering food or drinks on your next flight!

註：percentage 百分比

- (D) 1. What is the passage mainly about?
- (A) Tips on saving money when you take a plane.
 - (B) Rules on having a safe and comfortable flight.
 - (C) Ways to enjoy your food and drinks on a plane.
 - (D) Warnings about ordering food or drinks during a flight.
- (B) 2. According to the passage, which of the following statements is true?
- (A) The fruit in in-flight meals is always safe to eat.
 - (B) Eggs in an in-flight meal might be mixed with other things.
 - (C) Passengers are encouraged to ask for ice cubes with their cold drinks.
 - (D) Most airplanes now still serve drinking water from the plane’s water supply.
- (B) 3. Where is the passage LEAST likely to be found?
- (A) A newspaper.
 - (B) A history book.
 - (C) A science report.
 - (D) A health journal.