- (A) Since dogs cannot speak, we have to read their body language to better understand them.
- (B) Dogs often change their sleeping spots throughout the night, which can be a sign of restlessness.
- (C) Next time you visit a zoo, be sure to look closely at sleeping primates*, birds, reptiles, and sea creatures.
- (D) Since this is a very relaxed position, scientists think this happens when a dog feels truly comfortable in his or her environment.
- (E) When dogs feel close to their owners, they may choose to sleep on their bed next to them or with their head on their owner's lap.

Have you ever wondered how you can communicate with your dog?   1.   One way to tell what a dog is feeling is by looking at his or her sleeping behavior. Sometimes, your dog may sleep with his or her belly facing upward.   2.   You may have also seen your dog's face or body move during sleep, or you may have heard him or her whimper* or growl. This may happen because your dog is having a dream. Many scientists think that dogs can dream because they exhibit behaviors similar to humans' when they are asleep. Also, their sleeping behavior can be a sign of affection toward humans.   3.   This behavior shows that dogs trust their owners and feel that their owners are "part of the pack." Other than dogs, there are many animals that show their thoughts and feelings through their sleeping patterns.   4.   You may be surprised to find that they sleep just like humans!

八、閱讀測驗：9%

Most people agree that we all need to eat enough during the day to have the energy and brain power required to do everything we need to do. However, did you know that it is the same case with sleep?

People need sleep because that's what our brain needs. It is believed that sleep helps the brain restore its power and focus for the next day. If we don't get enough sleep at night, we tend to have a hard time focusing and are a bit clumsy the next day. Thus, the lack of sleep over a long period of time can damage our health and even lead to death.

Moreover, sleep also plays an important role in our ability to remember and learn. While we sleep at night, our brain stays active. It looks back on everything that happened during the day and organizes everything we have learned. However, during our sleep, our brain stores information more securely than when we first received it during the day. To do its job well, the brain needs the body to get a healthy amount of rest. For example, young children need 12 to 14 hours of sleep per night, and teenagers need nine hours.

In summary, getting enough sleep is good for our health and helps us function when we're awake. If you want to lead a happy life where you can be productive and maintain strong relationships with others, you should do all you can to sleep well every night!

- ( A ) 1. What is the passage mainly about?

Part 3 : 混合題

How Do Animals Survive the Winter?

When winter arrives, animals find various ways to survive in the chilly weather. The following are some examples of how wild creatures adapt to cold conditions.

1. Many animals—such as bears, bats, and groundhogs—hibernate* to save their energy.
2. Some birds, like storks and swallows, fly to warmer places or grow thicker feathers to stay warm.
3. Some animals survive the winter without hibernating. For example, beavers and squirrels store a lot of food for the whole winter, while shrews change what they eat in the winter.
4. Many insects find a dry place to spend the winter. For instance, a moth spends the winter in a cocoon*. Spiders, on the other hand, have a special kind of blood that keeps them from freezing.
5. Snakes and frogs burrow* into mud at the bottom of ponds and lakes. Throughout winter, their skin absorbs oxygen from the water as they sleep, and the mud keeps them warm.
6. Captive* or zoo animals often do not hibernate. It's easier for them to survive in winter.
