In Paraguay, there is a really cool structure called the Itaipu Dam. It looks like a massive* wall built on the Paraná River. However, more than a typical wall, it helps make electricity without hurting our planet. It is actually the second-largest hydroelectric* power plant in the world.

The Itaipu Dam was built from 1971 to 1984. It was a large project that cost over $19 billion. Paraguay and its neighbor, Brazil, both worked together to build it. The end result was a dam that is 8 km long and uses the power of the river's water to spin big turbines*, which are giant wheels that make electricity. The dam helps light up homes, schools, and cities in Paraguay. In fact, it is so powerful that it supplies around 90% of the country's electricity.

What's really fabulous about the Itaipu Dam is that it is eco-friendly. It doesn't harm the environment like some other power plants might. Instead, it shows us how we can use nature's resources smartly to provide power without making a mess of the environment.

In short, the Itaipu Dam is a big, important structure in Paraguay. It helps create electricity for lots of people and does it in a way that is good for our planet. It is like a super-powered green machine that makes our world a brighter place.

The Ant and the Grasshopper

(adapted from Aesop's Fables)

One day in summer, Grasshopper was hopping and singing in a field. Then, he saw Ant walking by. Ant was taking an ear of corn back to his nest.

“Hi there, Ant! What are you doing? Why don’t you hang out with me?” Grasshopper asked.

“No, thanks. I’m preparing food for winter, and I suggest you do the same,” Ant replied.

“Prepare for winter? Why? Winter is six months from now, and we still have a lot of food to eat!” said Grasshopper.

Ant ignored Grasshopper and kept carrying the corn.

When winter came, Grasshopper found that there was nothing left for him to eat. Just when he was about to die, he saw that the ants were eating the food they had stored in the summer.

Only then did Grasshopper realize that it is always best to prepare for the days of necessity.
