Society is governed by law. If nobody enforced rules, the sense of 1. we feel through living close to one another would not exist, nor would society be able to function. This is why preventing 2., however minor, is so important.

Even not so serious offenses—like creating graffiti, in my 3.—should be policed very strictly. The authorities should, therefore, try just as hard to prevent such offenses as they can to prevent acts of theft or 4.. Graffiti that is not officially allowed or approved destroys private or state property, and it often takes a lot of time and effort and costs a lot of money to wash it 5..

Of course, I agree that graffiti can be seen as a form of artistic 6.. However, I also think that artists who wish to express themselves through this type of 7. art should consider other ways of doing so. They could, for example, transfer their views and ideas 8. the walls inside their own homes and then invite others to come and see and discuss their work.

At the end of the day, when graffiti is created without the 9. of the public and the government, it is not a legal act. No wonder most people are so strongly 10. it. If graffiti artists really want their artwork to be appreciated and their messages to be heard, they should look at the big picture and try to get society on their side first.

- (A) This is because such foods tend to contain a lot of sugar and fat.
 (B) Finally, many modern jobs require workers to sit for long hours at desks.
 (C) Research suggests that obesity is as big a problem in Asia as it is in Europe.
 (D) On the other hand, those who say a lack of exercise is the cause of obesity often blame the modern lifestyle.
 (E) Recent years have seen increased rates of weight gain and disease related to obesity in countries all around the world.

Throughout history, people have used technology to solve health problems. Despite major advances, developments, and inventions, however, one problem has only become worse over time. This problem is obesity*. 1. In the United States, for example, over 70% of all adults aged 20 and over are now overweight or obese. Scientists are fiercely debating* whether diet or lack of physical activity is more to blame.

Those who say diet is to blame often point to processed foods. 2. Moreover, processed foods often require little preparation, so children or adults who are unable to cook or prepare their own meals are more likely to purchase them. What's even worse is that unhealthy processed foods are often cheaper than healthy, natural products, which makes people even more likely to purchase them.

 3. Many of today's kids, for example, spend more time playing computer games at home than playing outside. Additionally, cars, buses, and trains now enable us to travel long distances easily, but they also mean we walk far less than our ancestors* did. 4. All these factors have one thing in common: They lead to less physical activity and less exercise.

So, which factor do you think is to blame, diet or lifestyle?

Graffiti is a special art form that can serve various functions. It can mark a territory, express a political opinion, or show people a new visual world by creating complex designs that confuse the eye. It can also blend cultures and art styles and help an artist feel free. These days, graffiti can be found in cities in almost every country; however, the treatment it receives is not always the same.

Graffiti is actually illegal in most places, but Bogota, Colombia, is a rare exception. This city has allowed graffiti since the public protested against a young graffiti artist being killed by the police in 2011. Since then, art on walls has been seen all over Bogota. More than eight thousand local artists there now create designs that show everything from Colombian culture to fantasy images.

Zurich, Switzerland, is another city where graffiti artists can display their talent freely. At the Rote Fabrik, graffiti artists are not merely allowed but actually encouraged to spray the walls. To Zurich locals, graffiti is not an illegal act but an expression of freedom.

In addition to the above two cities, graffiti artists can also display their talent in New York City, a city with a long history of graffiti related to hip hop culture and punk music. Most of the world's famous graffiti artists have been to New York and created many famous art pieces there. In fact, graffiti exists almost everywhere in the city, from small tags with people's names spray-painted on them to giant full-wall murals, like the Audubon Mural Project, which depicts birds that have fallen victim to climate change.

Thanks to places like these cities, graffiti artists around the world have spaces to show their artwork and to help graffiti culture further develop.

Part 3 : 混合題

I love my adopted cats—Shining, Spottie, and Mucho—very much. They are noble and beautiful and have never caused any trouble for me or my furniture. I cannot understand why some people shop for cats at pet stores instead of adopting them from animal shelters. Don't they know that pet stores cold-bloodedly force female cats and dogs to give birth to kittens and puppies? Buying animals from such stores actually supports this type of cruel behavior. By contrast, adopting a pet from a shelter saves a life because these animals are put to death if they stay at the shelter for a certain period. To survive, these little creatures need only a small space and food to eat. Moreover, after being adopted, they give you their unconditional love in return. So, don't buy a pet at a store. Adopt one instead!

1. 請從文章中最適當的單詞 (word) 填入下列句子空格中，並視語法需要做適當的字形變化。每格限填一個單詞 (word)。

Instead of buying cats and dogs at pet stores, we should support the (1) adoption of these furry friends from shelters to ensure their (2) survival.

2. From (A) to (F) below, choose the ONES that agree with the author's attitude.

B D F

- (A) Iris: "It's better to buy a pet from an actual store than online."
(B) Pete: "Adopting animals from animal shelters helps them live longer."
(C) Wayne: "Animals purchased in stores are less pretty than adopted ones."
(D) Ed: "Most pet stores think little about the health of female animals."
(E) Kim: "It doesn't matter where you buy your pet as long as you love it."
(F) Ellen: "Fewer animals bought from pet stores means fewer animals will be abused."

3. Which word in the text means "temporary safe places for homeless animals"?
