For the old French warship, it was a stormy month at sea. It had to cross the whole Atlantic Ocean. When it finally reached the east coast of America, the date was June 13, 1885. That day, the fog was very thick. It was so thick that nobody recognized the 1000-ton Isère. The 214 precious wooden boxes it carried, however, were all safe!

The Isère sailed into New York Harbor four days later. Around 200,000 people and hundreds of boats were gathered in the harbor. Everyone wanted to see what was inside the boxes. They watched as the French ship stopped at Bedloe’s Island. Workers started offloading the boxes.

Slowly but surely, they moved all 214 of them to a temporary building on the island. This was hard work. The boxes actually contained very heavy copper pieces. The smallest weighed around 75kg. Some weighed up to four tons!

Altogether, there were 350 copper pieces. Guess what! Lady Liberty had arrived! Now, they just had to assemble her.
