It's easy to leave the supermarket with less healthy food than you meant to buy. In part, that's just because it can be hard to 21. the urge to buy sweets or other junk food. However, supermarket managers also work hard to make certain food appeal to 22.. Unfortunately, this food is chosen because it is more 23. for the store, not because it's healthier. Processed* food such as 24. has colorful packaging to attract attention. In addition, buy-one-get-one-free and other 25. may make it seem to be good value.

So how can you avoid 26. buying and make better choices? One 27. that can help you focus on healthier food is called shopping the perimeter*. The perimeter of the supermarket—the sides and back—is where you are 28. to find healthy, fresh food. So begin with the fruit and veggies, and then go to the back, where the 29. and meat are. This keeps you out of the processed food 30. in the middle of the store. Shop the perimeter to eat more healthily and save money too.
